A fiber is a strand of glass or plastic that is used to form a rope or cord. When a fiber is made to be very strong, the fiber is called fiberglass. There are two main types of fibers: silk and synthetic. Silk is made from the cocoon of the silkworm, as are wool and many types of flax. Silk is less elastic than synthetic fiber, but it is more supple, draping naturally over a garment. Other names for silk fibers include silk, silky, silken, and now just silk. Synthetic fibers are non-fibrous materials made by spinning or molding, and they are produced by a variety of processes, usually involving polymerization, condensation, or other reactions. The raw materials used to produce the material used in the production of the filament are grouped as synthetic fibers. The group includes polyester, nylon, and polypropylene, although these are not classified as synthetic fibers, but as thermoplastics. Other synthetic fibers include polyurethane, acetate, acrylic. 09e8f5149f
