Q: Unable to run simple junit test case I am trying to test a java method using junit. When I run the test, I get the following error: Testcase: [SimpleTest$1@5732b360]: java.lang.NullPointerException Test: [SimpleTest$1@5732b360] The code is as follows: public class SimpleTest{ @Test public void testMethod(){ System.out.println("Test"); } } My java version is 6 I am using Eclipse Luna on windows 8.

A: You are running the test not using junit. Try to run the test with Eclipse.

Q: HTML5: how to encode ' + '<' + '>' + " ; But it is against the HTML5 specification. The second way is to use htmlspecialchars() function. But I haven't found what charset to use. The third way is to use replace() method and replace "\s" with '>'). This work on Firefox, but not on Chrome. Why? How to correct this behavior? Is it a real bug or I'm doing something wrong? A: It is the browser that is wrong, plain and simple, and you haven't indicated which browser(s) you're trying to work with. Many browsers, including Firefox, do this.
